It is not unusual to find eggs in fowls killed for the table; but it is unusual to find chickens. This is said on good authority to have happened in Eminence, Mo., when a fully developed chick, enclosed in a sort of a pouch, was found inside a hen that was being prepared for the pot.

About the latest "gouge" we have heard of among the sharpers, is their hauling what purports to be barrels of sugar, among the farmers and offering to sell it to them at greatly reduced prices, but it is soon discovered that he has purchased a barrel of salt, on the top of which a layer of sugar has been placed.

A young Republican named Kleinhenn, living in Defiance county, attempted to vote in Napoleon at the recent election. The judges refused his ballot, whereat the Republican bosses became exceedingly wrath, and the "hoodlums" gave the young man money to go to Defiance and vote, and even went so far as to telephone for a rig to be in readiness to convey the young would-be illegal voter to his proper voting precinct. The fellow pocketed the "boodle" and instead of going to Defiance repaired to his boarding house, bragging of how he played it sharp upon the Republican bosses.

At this season there are many inquiring how to keep cider sweet. There are many methods employed, some of which so injure its taste that it had been better to let it ferment. Here are two receipts which have been tested and found good: First—To one barrel of cider add half a pound of white mustard seed, one half an ounce of oil of sassafras. Second—To each barrel of cider add two and a half pounds of rock candy and a half pound of raw beef steak. In using either recipe let the cider reach the stage of fermentation desired before using the recipe, and keep the air excluded as much as possible.

Wheat and other grains are likely to have more or less of a rival in the sweet potato. A patent has been issued for process of treating sweet potatoes for making flour. The object of the invention is to produce a wholesome and nutritious article of diet from the sweet potato—one that will not be liable to become frozen or decayed, and which shall embody all the valuable portions of the potato, especially the starch and saccharine matter.

For the treatment of that dread disease diphtheria, prevailing to an alarming extent in parts of adjoining counties, the French method of treatment is said to have performed many cures. It consists of pouring equal parts of turpentine and coal tar into a cup and setting the mixture on fire. The smoke and vapor arising dissolve the fibrinous exudations which choke the patient and he immediately experiences relief. The patient falls asleep and to all appearances inhales the smoke with pleasure. The violent coughing of the person need not occasion alarm, for unless he be able to clear his throat in time his case may be considered fatal. The same treatment is recommended for croup. The remedy is a simple one, and in the absence of something better should be given a trial.

Says an exchange: The constant chewing of gum is said to be more terrible and far reaching in its effects upon female beauty than the morphine, opium or tight corset habit combined. Those of an observing disposition cannot but have noticed the gradual transformation taking place among such of their lady friends as are addicted to gum chewing. The constant action of the jaw has a tendency to harden the muscles of the mouth and cheek, giving the face on the side the gum is chewed a hard, criminal expression. A more or less constant headache at the base of the brain is induced, which has been known to curdle and sour a sweet disposition in a single day. The presence of the wax in the mouth and chewing of the same causes a constant flow of saliva, causing the palate to harden.

OBITUARY.

Died, at the residence of her son, William Zierolf, in Marion township, Henry county, O., on the 3d day of November, 1886, Mrs. Mary Annie Zierolf, relict of Casper Zierolf, who died in 1880, aged 76 years, 2 months and 18 days.

Mrs. Zierolf was born in Bavaria, Germany, emigrating to this country in 1837; she landed in Boston where she met and married Casper Zierolf. Residing in Boston for eleven years they moved to Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1849, thence to Pennsylvania. In 1851 the young couple in search of a permanent home, removed to Liverpool, Medina county, Ohio; from there to the wilds of Henry county, O., settling in Marion township in 1852, where by frugal industry the woods disappeared and green meadows and fertile fields smiled upon their labors. Six children blessed their union all of whom reached man's estate, the pride of the declining years of honest parents, and honored by all who know them. Her son James died in 1876; two sons and a daughter live in Oregon, one daughter in Defiance and one son on the old homestead in Marion township. In all, she leaves five children and twenty-seven grand children who mourn her loss. The entire community extends to them a heart-felt sympathy at the sudden taking off of one that shall always be held in fond remembrance. She was ever anxious for her children, always ready, even anxious to sacrifice her personal comfort for theirs. Her interest was all centered in them and their spiritual welfare. She died as she lived, an exemplary christian, firm in her belief, and unwavering devotion to the teachings of the Catholic church. The funeral services were held at the residence of her son, Wm. Zierolf, Rev. Father Michenfelder officiating. Her children, grand children and hosts of friends mingle their tears in the gloom that was shed by all. May she rest in peace. 22
